WEDNESDAY, October 24, 1750.

GENOA, June 6.

ON the 23d of laſt month, the general proceſſion of the Aſhes of St. John the Baptiſt was performed here, tho' for ought the people know, it might as well be the Aſhes of the Man in the Moon. Among the companies of Penitents that ſhould aſſiſt at this proceſſion, there is one compoſed of the Sbirri, who wanted to diſtinguiſh themſelves this year, by availing themſelves of certain pretenſions. The other companies being informed of the deſign of the Sbirri, their Chriſtian zeal and charity flamed up to the higheſt pitch, and they reſolved to take vengeance on them, by plunging their ſtilletos into their breaſts, at a ſignal to be given in the midſt of their prayers and hymns during the proceſſion, or elſe ſeizing upon them all at once, and heaving them into the ſea. For this laudable purpoſe, ſuggeſted by the father of pride, the deſtroyer of mankind, they had hired 400 men well armed, who were to have been poſted at different places to act in concert with them. The government having had timely notice of this plot, prevented its being carried into execution, by ordering the Sbirri not to aſſiſt at the proceſſion with the uſual crucifix, and, moreover, to walk behind all thoſe that follow it: Beſides which, the ſenate ordered, that whereas the proceſſion uſually went as far as the point of the mole, to bleſs the ſea, it ſhould for this time go no farther than the entrance of the mole. By theſe precautions, the proceſſion was performed without any diſturbance or tumult.

Peterſburg, July 4. The Cronſtadt ſquadron, conſiſting of ſeven ſhips of the line and three frigates, put to ſea the 2d inſt. It is to touch at Revel, and be join'd there by the like number of men of war and frigates; after which they will proceed on a cruize to the Baltic. It is ſtill given out, that there is no other deſign in this, than to exerciſe the ſeamen.

Madrid, July 7. Mr. Keen continues to confer with the king's miniſters about an accommodation of the differences between the two courts. As to the execution of the 16th article of the treaty of Aix la Chapelle, we cannot yet ſee how that affair may be decided: However one may perceive in both courts an almoſt equal inclination to ſettle it by way of equivalent or compenſation. An old habit, or rather a confirm'd prejudice, made it believ'd, that the Spaniards could not work their mines in the Indies without negroes from the coaſt of Guinea. The want of thoſe negroes during the nine years war with the Engliſh, made the government recur to the expedient of employing the natives of the country in that work, not as ſlaves, but as hired day labourers. This ſucceeded, and the mines were as well wrought as by the negroes. So that as we could do without the latter for ſome years, we hope to have no occaſion for them hereafter; at leaſt we cannot at preſent foreſee what ſhould force us to return to the former method.

Legborn, July 13. We have accounts from all parts of ſuch a plentiful harveſt, that ſeveral of our merchants will have large quantities of corn left upon their hands, or elſe muſt be obliged to part with it at a conſiderable loſs. The Engliſh merchants have offered to furniſh Spain with what corn they may have occaſion for in that kingdom; ſo that we can have no hopes of diſpoſing of any that way, and that ſeems to be the only market.

Stockholm, July 17. The 15th inſt. we received advice, by a ſhip arrived from Finland, that the Cronſtadt and Revel ſquadrons have joined off the latter port; upon which our court has ſent out three frigates and three gallies from Carelſcroon, to cruize along the coaſt, and exerciſe the ſeamen.

Venice, July 18. The ſenate have intimated to the pope's nuncio, that it would be agreeable to them, if he withdrew in five days from this city, and five days more from the territories of the republic. The government has likewiſe ſent orders to our embaſſador at Rome to return home. This miſunderſtanding has been occaſioned by the Roman court's late deciſion in the affair of the partriarchate of Aquileia. As the republic complains that this deciſion is advantageous only to a neighbouring court, it is feared that theſe firſt ſteps will be productive of hotter diſputes. The Imperial miniſter has diſpatched a courier to his court on this occaſion.

Extract of a letter from Berlin, July 21.

"This day a courier arrived from Stockholm, with ſome diſpatches of the utmoſt importance; the contents of which we may be able to ſpeak of next poſt. In the mean time, it is whiſpered that thoſe diſpatches are deciſive in their kind, and that there muſt quickly be a ſolid peace, or elſe a war in the North.

Paris, July 24. Laſt Saturday the parliament being aſſembled, on the trial of a youth of 17 years of age, who in the late tumult here, forgot himſelf ſo far as to run to fetch fire, in order to burn the houſe of M. la Foſſe, one of the city commiſſaries; juſt as the tryal ended, and the crime plainly proved upon him, ſo that nothing more was expected than that ſentence of death muſt paſs on him, the female ſhopkeepers in and about the court of the palace, pitying the unfortunate delinquent on account of his youth and comely figure, came in a body, to the number of 100 and upwards, and threw themſelves at the feet of the firſt preſident of the parliament: One of them in particular, harangued him in ſo moving a ſtrain of natural eloquence, that being no longer able to withſtand their ſollicitations, and perhaps induced thereto by prudential reaſons, he granted him a reſpite for a fortnight, that they might have time to apply to the dauphineſs in behalf of the priſoner.

Newcaſtle, July 28. On Tueſday night laſt about eleven o'clock, broke out the moſt dreadful fire ever known in Newcaſtle: It began at the bottom of an entry or narrow lane, in the Cloſe, near Tyne-bridge, in a cellar made uſe of for a warehouſe, ſituate on the ſide of the river, where the buildings ſtood extreamly crouded together, and without any wharff or key betwixt them and the water, which made all approach for aſſiſtance more difficult and dangerous. About half a ſcore of dwelling houſes, and a great many warehouſes, with abundance of goods and furniture, were entirely conſumed before eight o'clock the next morning; the fire then ſtill burning, but the danger of its ſpreading further, or doing more miſchief, pretty much over. The damage ſuſtained upon the whole, is computed by ſome at near 10,000l. It was a remarkable good providence, that throughout the whole night and the next day, the air was exceeding ſtill and calm; for if there had been but a moderate wind, in all probability a few hours would have ſeen all the Sand hill, and perhaps the greateſt part of the town, in aſhes.

They tell us from Penrith, that laſt Sunday night, about 8 o'clock, a ſtrange Phænomenon was ſeen in the air in ſundry ſhapes, ſometimes appearing in the form of a broad ſword, and at other times in that of a trumpet.

They write from Darlington, that on Tueſday morning laſt, they had there the moſt terrible claps of thunder, and flaſhes of lightning, ever known in the memory of man, which ſplit the ſpire of the church from top to bottom, and damaged two or three houſes.

Dublin, July 14. Laſt Wedneſday Edward Coſſeloc, and Mary his wife, were executed at St. Stephen's Green, for filing and diminiſhing guineas and half guineas. The man was hanged, drawn, and quartered, and the woman was burnt to aſhes.

LONDON,

LONDON.

June 6. The following remark is made for the use and reflection of those who reason about the Herring Fishery.——
At the German markets the best Dutch herrings sell, on an average, at about 30 l. per Last. What is given for the same kind of fish by wholesale in England, is not known, but may judged of by the following note.——I bought of a fishmonger at Temple-Bar, two of the smallest siz'd Dutch herrings, and paid for them, at the lowest price, three pence each. There is 1200 or thereabouts of these kind of herrings in a barrel, which at three pence each is 15 l. There are twelve barrels to a last; consequently these fishmongers make of each last by retail, 180 l. Now it is proposed to the same fishmongers, to sell them herrings, every way as perfect, at 30 l. per last; and then the only question is, Whether a fishmonger at Temple Bar can afford to live at somethng less profit than 500 per cent, when the commodity is neither hazardous nor perishable.

QUERIES.

As the Dutch busses always arrive at the beginning of June, to the number of ten or eleven hundred, on the coasts of Shetland: What figure will two, three, or four English busses make amongst such a fleet of rivals?

And as the Dutch always wet their nets on those coasts by the eleventh of June, (as they are oblig'd to do by an express order of the states general) and then immediately enter Bressa Sound: Will they not, this year, have considerably the start of our English adventurers in point of time, as well as infinitely the advantage of them in point of force?

Are we to expect under these circumstances, that they will treat us with more than Dutch politeness, and not endeavour to impede the operations of our little squadron, in order to discourage those who are engaged in this new project?

But ought not we, on the other hand, to be provided against the insults of these intruders? And should not the nation resent any injury offer'd to the British busses as much, as if it was offer'd to one of his majesty's ships of war? Should not the Dutch, on this occasion, be made sensible by whose indulgence they have hitherto drain'd the Ocean of its wealth, and who has power to put a stop to their proceedings, and resume this trade out of their hands, in spite of their prohibitions of casks and hoops, the restraint laid on their sailors, and the suspension of their duty on white herrings?

Extract of a letter from Paris, June 12. N. S.

" Mr. Mildmay, one of the king of Great-Britain's commissaries, has just terminated the article of his commission, relating to prisoners taken at sea, during the late war: And Mr. Shirley, his colleague, is to take in hand forthwith, the affair of the prizes, and the limits of the territories possessed by the two crowns in America.

" The king has sent orders to the commanders of his ships in America, to take up their stations in such a manner as may best protect our fishery on the banks of Newfoundland, and prevent its being impeded by any nation whatsoever.

" The parliament prosecutes the affair of the late tumults; above twenty persons are already taken into custody for the same; and we expect that the officers of the police, who exceeded their orders, will no more be spared, than the private persons who fomented the tumults."

We are assured from good authority, that his royal highness the duke of Cumberland has ordered 6000 pair of shoes to be made and given to the new settlers in Nova-Scotia.

July 12. On Saturday morning one of the mates late belonging to the Duke of Cumberland Indiaman, which is lost near the Cape de Verd Islands, arrived at the India House: He came home with sixteen other men, in the long-boat belonging to the lost ship. No part of the treasure had been taken out of the wreck when they came away, but preparations were making to dive for it. 'Twas feared she would be plundered by the people of the country.

July 14. They write from Hanover, of the 14th instant, N. S. that they have had terrible storms in divers parts of that country; that most of the corn has been laid, by hail of an extraordinary size, and almost all the hay that was not yet got in, has been spoiled by continual heavy rain.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Annapolis, 23*d* October, 1750.

WHEREAS it has been Mr. John Philpot's and Company's Misfortune to be obliged to submit to a Bankruptcy, which is chiefly, if not only, due to the great Credits he has given, to his Friends and Correspondents in Maryland; but as there are Effects in the Country due to Mr. Philpot, which will much more than answer the Claims against him; and which I should have taken proper measures to Collect and Pay to the several Persons who have just Claims on him; and as Mr. Philpot has taken an early, and I hope a satisfactory Step, by the following Letter, to make every one easy, who has any Claim on him; any Thing more may be unnecessary from me: But if it should, I assure all concerned, that I will do any thing that can be reasonably desired of

BRIAN PHILPOT, junior.

" SIR, London, the 21st July, 1750.

" THE Delay of our Effects coming from abroad obliges " us to submit to Bankruptcy. We shall be in this " Night's Gazette upon that Account: And as we have " sufficient to pay every Body, when Things are got in, in " order to prevent any Imbezzlement of our Effects in your " Province by Attachment, or otherwise, this is to acquaint " you, that all Moneys owing from us to you, or any other " Persons abroad, will be paid to you or them, on giving " your Draughts at 30, 40, or 60 Days Sight, upon Messieurs " Torver and Philpot, Merchants in London; or if you please " to write to them for Goods, they will be sent you as well " bought, and as regularly, as from any other in the Trade, " which will be confirmed by a Letter from themselves, I " think by this Opportunity, but if not by this Opportunity, " you may be sure of it by the next; for the Ship this is de- " sign'd by goes down to-day. Such News as this often put- " ting the People in great Hurry for making Attachments, I " write as early as I can, in hopes to put a Stop to any such " unnecessary expensive Proceedings; for I assure, as observ'd " above, all Debts we owe abroad will be paid by the above " named Gentlemen: And, for the general Satisfaction of " our Creditors, we shall be obliged to you, if you will Pub- " lish what relates to their being paid, in your Public News " Papers. We intend to write the same to Mr. Murdock, Mr. " Deacon, Mr. Key, Mr. Belt, Mr. Bond, Mr. Ridgely and " Brian Philpot, junior; and by the next Opportunity you " shall have your Account Current.

" The Effects coming home from you, or any others, con- " sign'd to us, will be taken a very true Care of, and be " punctually accounted for at their just Value; the Gentlemen " managing our Affairs having come to a Conclusion, that I " shall dispose of my Friends Tobacco, and what else may be " consign'd us, in the best Manner our Markets and the qua- " lity of the Goods will afford. If any Thing happens to " prevent my disposing of the Consignments now expected, " they will be disposed of, and accounted for, by Messieurs " Torver and Philpot, than whom Nobody is better qualified, " or safer to be trusted; and should you think well of letting " them partake of a Share of your Business, I dare say they " will please you both in Buying and Selling; as I have taken " Care that Nobody has had their Goods disposed of for less " than their Value, and what has been sent in Goods have " not been bought dearer than they would have been had this " not happened; also provided that none shall suffer by us, " unless it be the Government: It meets with the Approbation " of all People here; so hope it will be thought of in the same " manner by you, and our other Friends abroad.

" Sir, Your most obedient humble Servant,

JOHN PHILPOT.

The above is a true Copy of Mr. John Philpot's Letter to us, just received by Capt. Gerrard. CHARLES CARROLL,
